Specialized Victim Assistance

Services provided to victims of relationship abuse and sexual abuse.

- Being a victim of crime can be hard on you emotionally, physically and financially. You have the right to be treated with courtesy and respect.
- Too often, survivors feel confused, frustrated, and may feel re-victimized by the criminal justice system.
- The issues experienced by survivors of relationship abuse and sexual abuse are unique and their needs are different from victims of other crimes.
- You have the right to be given information about victim services and how the criminal justice system works as well as the right to receive information about your case.
- Services include emotional support, justice system information, safety planning, referrals to counselling and other services and support to victims going to court.
- Specialized Victim Services can help you by providing information and application forms for crime victim assistance benefits and victim notification as well as information about victim impact statements.
- Services are free of charge and are voluntary.
